

MURRAY FARMHOUSE

MIDDLETOWN, MONMOUTH COUNTY, NEW JERSEY

The Murray Farmhouse was originally constructed c. 1767 as the home of Joseph Murray, an Irish mason who immigrated to the American colonies around 1767 and established a farm in Middletown. Murray was killed in an act of civil aggression related to his role in a local militia during the Revolutionary War. Today owned by the Township of Middletown, The Murray Farmhouse is used for tours and educational programs.

- Services: Historic Preservation Plan, Documentation of Existing Conditions, and Design and Contract Documents for Partial Exterior Restoration.
- Total Project Costs: $47,460